issues are complex and that many indigenous people suffer from social issues, including homelessness, crime, domestic violence, substance abuse and suicide. Mr. O'Toole was promised to spend $352-million over the next three years to create 1,000 residential drug treatment beds and build 500 recovery community centres. New Democratic Party If elected, the NDP would introduce a national pharmacare program. The party's platform says the Bloc adheres to the Gérin-Lajoie doctrine, first formulated in 1965, which says Quebec should consi der its own international relations - including signing treaties - in areas under its jurisdiction, such as education and culture. And it promises to cut the GST on the construction of affordable units and use federal lands for some of the properties. GreensMost of the party's housing proposals target the creation of affordable housing. Here's what you need to know about each party's platform and where they stand on the issues that affect Canadians the most.Live updates: Canada 2021 federal election resultsSubscribe to The Globe and Mail's politics newsletter for the latest election updates. (It's not yet clear how they would be enforced.) They are also pledging to end subsidies to that industry - though that would apparently not rule out government supports for investments that help fossil-fuel companies lower their emissions, including carbon capture technology, for which a new federal tax credit was in development when the election was called. The NDP jobs plan is geared toward "a low-carbon future," with the party promising to support jobs in energy-efficiency retrofitting, renewable energy and public transit. They would also expand the resources available to sexual assault survivors in the military through the Sexual Misconduct Response Centre and make these services available to all Department of National Defence employees, veterans and members of military families. The party would also increase provincial health transfers based on demographics and health needs. The party would change Health Canada's mandate to focus on mental health and addiction, health promotion, disease prevention and the risks of climate change. Conservative Party gun proposals focus on a review and replacement of the current firearms classification system. They also pledge new legislation to crack down on blockades by protesters, such as those opposing pipelines; an end to the federal ban on oil tankers off British Columbia's northern coast; and a revival of the scrapped Northern Gateway pipeline. Another proposal goes after so-called straw purchasers - licensed gun owners who buy firearms legally before selling them on the black market - by requiring anyone who transfers more than three guns a year to get a business licence. NDPFirearms policy warrants a single paragraph in the NDP platform. In that vein, they would enable staff at Canada's embassies around the world to support the work of feminists and LGBTQ2 and human-rights activists by quadrupling the annual investment in the Canada Fund for Local Initiatives, which funds projects in developing countries. They say they would work with Indigenous communities to find new approaches to the issue. And while the Liberals, Tories and NDP all express interest in tariffs (known as carbon border adjustments) on some carbon-intensive imports, the Greens are unequivocal about imposing them.BlocThe Bloc's platform does not set an emissions-reduction target for 2030, nor does it feature a comprehensive set of climate promises. The party would also create a new home-renovation tax credit for families adding a secondary unit for a live-in family member. The party is proposing a number of changes to employment insurance, including making EI available to people who quit their jobs to go back to school or to provide child care, and expanding EI for seasonal workers.GreensThe Greens support extending wage and rent subsidies until pandemic-related restrictions are fully lifted. The party said it would create one million homes over three years via proposals such as tying public transit funding to increased density and converting at least 15 per cent of the federal government's portfolio of buildings into housing.NDPThe party plans to lengthen the maximum mortgage amortization period to 30 years from 25 for insured mortgages on first-time home purchases; increase the rebate on closing costs for first-time home buyers; and provide struggling renters with subsidies of as much as $5,000. They propose roughly quadrupling Canada's climate financing to developing countries to US$4-billion annually. It would also assess Canada's membership in military alliances such as NATO and NORAD to ensure they are meeting Canada's priorities when it comes to diplomacy, development and defence.BlocThe party wants the Davie shipyard in Lévis, Que., to receive a larger share of the federal government contracts to build ships for the Royal Canadian Navy. The party also plans to extend the moratorium on evictions until the pandemic is over and raise the 1-per-cent vacant home tax for foreign owners who leave their properties unoccupied.BlocThe Bloc proposes using federally owned properties to develop low-income housing and supports a tax on real estate speculation; but, unlike the other parties, does not make facilitating home ownership a priority - ostensibly because renting is more socially acceptable and common in Quebec than in other parts of the country.PPCThe party proposes tackling the housing crisis by slashing annual immigration levels to between 100,000 and 150,000 from the current goal of approximately 400,000. It also takes aim at the Liberals' and Conservatives' support for "blue hydrogen," produced from fossil-fuel sites while using carbon-capture technology to minimize emissions, in favour of "green hydrogen," produced from renewable resources such as Quebec's hydroelectricity.PPCThe PPC platform promises robust support for pipeline projects, a reversal of the government's Northern B.C. oil tanker ban, as well as efforts to "counter anti-oil and anti-pipeline propaganda from radical environmentalists and foreign foundations." It also promises to "eliminate all corporate subsidies," which presumably would include those to oil and gas producers.source photo Fabrice Coffrini/AFP via Getty imagesForeign policyLiberalsThe Liberals promise to establish a "Canadian Centre for Peace, Order and Good Government" to expand the availability of Canadian expertise and assistance to countries seeking to advance justice, promote human rights, inclusion and democracy and deliver good governance. The party's $10-a-day child care program is intended to bring more women into the work force while increasing the number of jobs in the child care industry. Among their more specific proposals are the addition of carbon budgets to federal climate accountability legislation, which would allocate permissible emissions by sector over multiyear periods; a 2030 target for a net-zero power grid; and the creation of a civilian climate corps, to enlist young people for conservation efforts. Their biggest new climate promise in this election campaign is the proposed requirement that at least 50 per cent of passenger-vehicle sales be electric by 2030, supported by an extension of EV purchase rebates and increased spending on charging infrastructure. A Conservative government would also establish a national proof-of-vaccination program that Canadians could use for international travel. They also promise to finally move forward with a plan to lower credit card fees charged to merchants.ConservativesThe Tories' Canada Job Surge Plan would cover 25 to 50 per cent of the salaries of new hires, depending on how long the employee was out of work. The party has also pledged to take other steps, such as enacting a "For Indigenous, By Indigenous" housing strategy. They would call a public inquiry into harassment and discrimination in the Canadian Armed Forces; develop a new Arctic naval base at Churchill, Man., that would make the Arctic more accessible to the Navy year round; update and enhance the North Warning System and extend it to protect the entire Canadian Arctic; create a NATO centre of excellence for Arctic defence at the Resolute Bay CAF Training Centre to enhance co-operation and interoperability with allies; join the Quadrilateral Security Dialogue (Australia, India, Japan and the United States) in the Indo-Pacific to address increasing instability in the region, which they say is a security threat that Canada can no longer ignore; and procure two armed, heavy icebreakers for the Royal Canadian Navy to contribute to Canada's efforts to "own our north" in the face of increased Russian and Chinese activity in the Arctic.NDPThe party promises that contracts for new military equipment, including ships and fighter jets, will ensure industrial benefits and jobs for Canadians. They agree on the need for a federal registry of beneficial owners of property, and each has a plan to make it harder for foreigners to buy residential property. The closest the Tories come to a broad tax cut is their proposal for a one-month GST holiday in December for purchases at brick-and-mortar retailers, carrying a price tag of $1.8-billion. Passengers on federal vessels would need to provide a recent negative test or undergo a rapid test before boarding a train, plane or ship. The party's single largest tax increase would be an annual wealth tax on households with a net worth of at least $10-million, a measure the NDP projects would raise $60.1-billion over five years. A Liberal government would also make it illegal to intimidate or harass a health professional carrying out their professional duties. Each party has promised to increase the supply and make it easier for young Canadians to buy a home. The party would reinforce Canada's Arctic sovereignty through expanded patrols and funding for community infrastructure development, regional sustainability projects, research, cultural and other socioeconomic activities. The party says all its candidates must be fully vaccinated.GreensMs. Paul says it's important for Canadians to get vaccinated against COVID-19 - but cautions that a mandatory vaccination program risks alienating or excluding some individuals and groups.BlocMr. Blanchet says he would like to see more vaccine production based in Quebec.PPCM. Bernier opposes mandatory vaccination and is the only leader of a major federal political party who is not vaccinated against COVID-19. To help workers displaced by a transition to cleaner energy sources, they are promising a strategy that includes expanded employment insurance, retraining and job placement help, as well as the protection of retirement benefits.GreensThe Greens propose the most aggressive transition away from fossil-fuel production, with an end to the leasing of federal land for that purpose, an end to all new oil exploration and pipeline projects and a phase-out of existing bitumen operations between 2030 and 2035. They are promising an array of clean-technology supports aimed largely at helping the industry reduce emissions and remain competitive, including $5-billion for carbon capture. Although they no longer oppose carbon pricing outright, they would dramatically scale it back - pledging to cap the fuel charge paid by most fossil-fuel consumers at $50 per tonne, while switching from the current system of rebates to one in which every payment would go into a personalized "low-carbon savings account." They, too, are promising an EV sales quota - 30 per cent of 2030 new vehicle sales - but have made no promises regarding rebates. If re-elected, the Liberals say they would keep up "temporary" wage and rent support just for the tourism sector, which has struggled with lockdowns and travel restrictions. The NDP supports the use of vaccine passports, and Mr. Singh has called on the government to roll out a national system as soon as possible. The platform also emphasizes the need to expand access to virtual care and telemedicine.Bloc QuébecoisThe Bloc wants to improve domestic production of vaccines and personal protective equipment. The Conservatives would also increase employment insurance benefits for seriously ill individuals to 52 weeks from 26. It also cites other major issues, including the legacy of residential schools, and says it is not possible to address more than a few of those issues in the context of an election platform. He has also pledged to create new rules that would require federal public employees to be vaccinated. Another is an additional $3-billion for natural climate solutions, with a focus on working with farmers.NDPThe New Democrats are calling for Canada's emissions-reduction commitment to be raised to 50 per cent by 2030. Those subsidies are set to end on Oct. Like the NDP, they suggest the introduction of carbon budgets and a civilian climate corps. That includes a 5-per-cent tax credit for investments in capital equipment over the next two years and a 25-per-cent tax credit for individual investments of as much as $100,000 in small businesses. While he has stated that there would be consequences for people who fail to comply with the policy, he has not provided any details. Other measures include credits for construction workers, seniors care, mental-health benefits and expanding the Canada Child Benefit. Here is where they differ:LiberalsThe party would cut the federal mortgage insurance rate by 25 per cent for home buyers with down payments of less than 20 per cent; create a new tax-free savings account for first-time home buyers; increase the rebate on closing costs for first-time home buyers; and fund a $1-billion program for rent-to-own projects. They are similarly committed to a building retrofit strategy. The party would also cap the fees credit cards charge merchants on every transaction to 1 per cent from the current 1.4 per cent.GreensThe Greens would also extend the wage and rent subsidies until all pandemic restrictions are lifted. It was inspired by a program that ran in Prince Edward Island last year. Owners will be able to sell their guns or have them rendered permanently inoperable. Tightening the rules for the federal minimum tax for individuals would raise $1.7-billion over five years. And they promise to introduce a new EI benefit for self-employed Canadians that would provide assistance for up to 26 weeks.ConservativesThe Conservatives are promising something similar to the Canada Recovery Hiring Program. They would also help establish an international anti-corruption court; donate at least 200 million vaccine doses to vulnerable populations around the world through the COVAX initiative by the end of 2022; launch a comprehensive Asia-Pacific strategy to deepen diplomatic, economic and defence partnerships in the region; introduce legislation to eradicate forced labour from Canadian supply chains and ensure that Canadian businesses operating abroad are not contributing to human-rights abuses; and work with G7, NATO and like-minded partners to develop and expand collective responses to arbitrary detention, economic coercion, cyberthreats, foreign interference in democratic processes and egregious violations of human rights.ConservativesThe Tories would shift Canada's international trade priorities away from China and toward other countries in the Indo-Pacific and Africa. Illustration by Photo illustration by The Globe and Mail (source image: Reuters)On Sept. And the party has promised to build or repair 1.4 million homes over the next four years and create a $4-billion fund to push Canada's largest cities to create 100,000 homes within three years.ConservativesThe party would "encourage" seven- and 10-year fixed mortgage terms in order to provide stability for first-time buyers; make it easier for homeowners to renew their mortgages with another lender; and provide tax incentives for owners of rental properties. The party says it would eliminate all government subsidies to businesses, including regional development grants and conditional loans and loan guarantees.Source photo Andrew Vaughan/The Canadian PressClimate targets and how to meet themLiberalsIn government, the Liberals pledged to reduce Canada's greenhouse gas emissions to 40-45 per cent below 2005 levels by 2030. In addition, the party would create a universal dental care program and provide public coverage for mental-health services, eye and ear care and fertility services. And the Conservatives also propose a number of new loans and tax credits for small-business owners: a loan of as much as $200,000 (with up to 25 per cent of it forgivable, based on revenue losses); a 25-per-cent tax credit on as much as $100,000 personally invested in a small business; and a refundable tax credit for new capital investments.NDPThe New Democrats would extend the wage and rent subsidies indefinitely for small businesses - until they are fully reopened. 23. The party is also looking to spur job creation through a set of tax credits aimed at boosting business investment. The party also supports supervised drug-use sites.Green Party of CanadaThe Greens would create a national pharmacare program and expand universal health care to include long-term care and improved access to mental-health services. The program covers part of the cost of hiring back workers or increasing employees' hours for businesses that saw major revenue drops during the pandemic. The NDP also promises to pay the employer portion of EI and CPP premiums for new and rehired staff. It plans to cut the Bank of Canada's inflation target to 0 per cent from 2 per cent, which it says would cool home price inflation. For retailers, the party proposes a month-long GST holiday. In a statement, a spokesperson said the party would help small businesses by encouraging provinces to end all lockdowns and vaccine passports and by shrinking the size of the federal government.Source photo Patrick Doyle/The Canadian PressIndigenous issuesLiberalsThe Liberals say they would move ahead on reconciliation with Indigenous peoples by confronting the legacy of residential schools and launching an Indigenous urban, rural and northern housing strategy. The platform proposes increasing penalties for gun smugglers, expanding RCMP border enforcement teams and stiffening punishments for people who commit gun crimes while prohibited from possessing a firearm. And the Liberals would tax vaping products, raising $395-million over five years. And it wants to see more weapons intercepted at the border.PPCThe PPC would replace the Firearms Act "with new legislation that will prioritize effectiveness measures to improve public safety and fight crime"; replace the current licensing system with a lifetime certification system; simplify the firearms classification system to eliminate what it calls "ineffective restrictions"; repeal the federal cabinet's 2020 ban on some 1,500 types of firearms; and "mandate that all future changes to firearms regulation be completed through Parliament only."Small businessLiberalsEarly in the pandemic, the government created wage and rent subsidies to help businesses that lost revenue due to COVID-19. It calls for the Trans Mountain pipeline expansion project to be scrapped and an end to any promotion of oil exports. The biggest credit by far is the doubling of the Canada Workers Benefit for low-income individuals and families, a measure that would cost $5.8-billion a year by 2025-26.
